The occupation of merchandising i by some regarded as altogether of a onesided nature, and is followed by many solely for the advantages reaped by the seller. It is this disposition that soon teaches a discriminating public which houses to avoid. The constantly-increasing patronage which has been accorded to our firm we regard as a fair return for our efforts to give our cus tomers the benefit of every advantage which cash purchases and careful management have placed within our reach. One of the duties of every merchant, but neglected by some, is to keep his storehouse well stocked with seasonable stuffs. Recognizing this duty, we have this year been constantly adding to our supplies, and can safely claim one of the
